Experts shared insights into trading psychology to build skills and experience

Dubai – ActivTrades PLC, the premium global regulated broker dealing in foreign exchange and Contract for Differences (CFDs) and a UK-regulated firm, has concluded its annual financial summit successfully last Saturday with an outstanding attendance from individual traders and companies across GCC countries.

The summit was held at the Shangri-La Hotel in Dubai and was hosted by well-known financial experts within the industry who educated the delegates in essential strategies and trading psychology needed to begin, or improve, their trading skills. At the end of the full-day programme, the attendees had the opportunity to interact with the experts during a Q&A session about the industry and to gain knowledge and insights from the expert speakers.

Psychology and Risk management were highly recognised and appreciated by the attendees by highlighting in-depth how human psychology has a direct effect on traders' decisions. The speakers showcased how the psychology of traders can impact their trading performance. The management of risk comes from traders knowing when they should continue or stop trading. One of the negative habits that many traders have is "Ego" and the sense of revenge. A key piece of advice when losing money is that traders must avoid these habits and maintain a rational approach to decision-making.
